PW called this ABC primer featuring wooden alphabet blocks "inviting and stimulating." Ages 2-6.
Copyright 1999 Reed Business Information, Inc.

Ages 3^6. Ernst, the author of such ebullient favorites as Zinnia and Dot (1992), here offers an alphabet book that is just right for its target audience. The premise is that the wooden blocks, with one letter to a block, were once together in their box. But now they've all gone astray. Where are they? Well, the A is in an airplane, the B has tumbled into the bath, and the L has landed in a pile of leaves. Each block is prominently featured in the framed paintings that show simple shapes and situations, which are, for the most part, easily identifiable to young ones. Although there is nothing especially groundbreaking about her book, Ernst gets high marks for having everything just right: the colors, the size, the appeal. At the book's conclusion, the blocks are back together but "not for long. Soon they will disappear again. Can you guess where they might go?" An open invitation to have children make up their own scenarios while learning their letters. Fun! Ilene Cooper --This text refers to an out of print or unavailable edition of this title.

My 3 year old granddaughter wasn't very interested in it, but maybe it will hold more interest when she is a bit older.

My first graders loved this book. I read it to them and now they play the letters are lost game. It's a great book to get them thinking about the letters.

My son really enjoyed this story. It was great for letter recognition, and was a quick read. The pictures are nice and it held his attention.
